

TWINN FOR CLAY; DEATH FOR RICO.

Having razed with great severity in Hong Kong from 1844 to 1858. Thence the epidemic spread to Bombay, where it has since remained without cessation for the last three years, and whence it spread to all the Northern, Western and Southern provinces of India. It then made its appearance in Madagascar.

There seems to be no doubt that the importation of the plague into Egypt was brought about by some ship which called at plague-stricken ports either in India or the Persian Gulf.

Dr. Calmette pointed out, furthermore, that the plague proceeds by leaps and bounds, skipping great stretches of territory, and that it is propagated particularly by rats and fleas.

The "black death," as it is sometimes called, is essentially a fifth disease. It is caused by a microbe, which can be destroyed under certain conditions by the use of serum. The English authorities are using the most strenuous efforts to prevent it from extending its ravages beyond Egypt, but it has been suggested that in view of Egypt's relation to Europe, the work of quarantining the country and stamping out the disease should be made an international duty.

Once Clara ward, of Detroit.

The unhappy woman who lies in a stupa in her plague-stricken villa just outside Alexandria was once Clara Ward, daughter of old Eber Ward, of Detroit, shipowner, shipbuilder, timber magnate, speculator, miser and man of many love affairs.

There was a taint that appeared in different forms in various members of the family. Clara Ward was extremely beautiful, but she had wild impulses, and she encountered nothing in her home life to discourage them.

At the age of seventeen, with $3,000,000 of her own, her mother engineered a match between her and Prince Joseph de Chimay and de Carman, head of the historic Belgian house of that name. The wedding took place in Paris. Lord Lytton, the English Ambassador, and Whitehall held the American Minister, were the witnesses for the bride, who wore a dress that had cost $10,000.

Misage did not restrain Clara Ward's impulses; it merely enlarged her opportunities. Her husband was too cynical to concern himself with his wife's amusements. Prince Baldwin, the profligate heir to the Belgian throne, fell in love with her. While the scandal was at its height he died suddenly and mysteriously. Gossips talked at first about a jealous husband. Later they talked about a jealous King.

Outdid All Her Former Exploits

The Princess Chimay kept the scandal-mongers of Europe busy by many exploits after that; but they all faded into insignificance when she flung herself at the head of the leader of a Hungarian band in a cafe chantant—Jancsi Rigo, the gypsy.

She did not tire of him, as might have been expected, for he was a man of life. She had already borne him one child before this tragic double birth in Alexandria.

After flinging away all the world for the gypsy, Clara Ward abandoned herself to recklessness. She seemed to study out means to shock and offend society. This was probably less innate wickedness than a pitiful feminine way of hurling defiance at the world, and it is needless to recapitulate the follies of one whom fate has overtaken so crushingly.

With the exception of those detained at quarantine, the Havana had all her passengers landed yesterday afternoon. The third day out, on the Ward line's East River pier, and it is said to be the first time in the history of coast navigation that his has been accomplished.

The nearest approach to the time of the Havana was made by the City of Puebla, ten years ago, when she covered the course in two days and twenty-two hours.

Now They Find Acids That Harm Us in Beer.

Dr. Springfield Tells the Pure Food Court That the Beverage is Largely Adulterated with Salicylic Acid.

Chicago, June 6.—Dr. C. P. Springfield, consulting physician of the Chicago Baptist Hospital, told the pure food court this morning that beer is largely adulterated with salicylic acid.

"This acid is absolutely harmful," said the physician. "Salicylic acid is depressing to the heart and hinders respiration. I have often been called to attend men who were ill and said they had drunk nothing stronger than beer. Neither they, but that beer was adulterated by a poison."

It is understood that the committee will have the investigation continued in New York before hearing further testimony here.

Police as "White Wings" BY A CHICAGO ORDER.

Chief Kiple Directs That Patrolmen Shall Remove Dirt from Streets to the Curb Line.

Chicago, June 6.—Unless Chief of Police Kiple rescinds or modifies an order he has issued, members of the Police Department may go out on strike. The order directs that patrolmen shall remove from the street to the curb line all dirt or obstructions falling from wagons.

Each will be held responsible for the cleanliness of the streets on his post.

"I wonder what Kiple thinks we are?" said a Harrison street policeman. "It's a wonder he did not order us to take wheelbarrows, brooms and shovels out with us on our beats and keep the streets swept and clean. You can bet that I will not do any street cleaning work as long as I am a policeman, and there are not many officers that will."

DOUBLE-DECKED TURRETS CRITICISED BY FOLGER.

The Battle Ships Kentucky and Kearsarge Considered Dangerous by Many Naval Experts.

Washington, June 6.—The question of the double-decked turrets on the new battle ships Kentucky and Kearsarge will shortly be presented to the Navy Department in forcible form. The ships are nearing completion, and will probably be ready for their trip at Newport News by November.

It is the belief of many naval experts that the double-decked turret is a mistake, and that it not only impedes the lives of the men who man the turrets, but it may contribute to the instability of the ships which carry this enormous load.

Chief of Ordnance, who will command the Kearsarge, will probably file a protest against the system. He will, however, await the results of the first experiments at sea with the double-decked turrets.

While at the Navy department recently he expressed himself in such a way as to indicate his purpose, and he may ask to have the upper turrets, containing eight-inch guns, removed.

BOY SLAYER IN COURT; SELF-DEFENCE ALLEGED.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 6.—Little Peter Graham, the boy slayer of Louis Stahlman, was to have been arraigned on the charge of homicide to-day, but the State announced it had not completed its case, and asked for an adjournment until June 10, which was granted.

The prisoner's counsel, Attorney J. T. Lynch, said he proposed to show that young Graham acted in self-defence. By the advice of his counsel Graham refused to make any statement. In his confession to the police he stated that he found Stahlman rummaging about his mother's room, and seizing the revolver which he had "plugged" the victim.

Young Graham's mother to-day visited the city's coroner, and asked him to allow her to see the body of her son. She said she had been told that the body was in a cold storage place, and she wanted to see it.

When he was three years old, said she, he fell from a pile of rocks and struck his head. At times since he has acted very strangely, and many times his neighbors have told her that they think Peter was different from other boys.

NEW ORLEANS TO RUN HER OWN WATER WORKS.

New Orleans, La., June 6.—Municipal ownership scored a great victory in New Orleans to-day. By an exclusive vote of the property holders, an act was adopted providing for the expropriation of the water works which has been unsatisfactorily run by a private corporation.

The system will be greatly extended under the city's ownership. Water will be furnished without charge to the citizens. The bill provides for a complete sewerage and drainage system for the city, and in all for an outlay of about $30,000,000. The vote was very large, and women voted for the first time in the history of New Orleans.

FROM HAVANA HERE IN 2 DAYS 6 HOURS

The New Ward Line Steamship Breaks All Records for the Voyage.

HER NAME IS "HAVANA."

Brought One Hundred and Fifty Passengers Who Were Amazed at the Quick Trip.

The new Ward liner Havana raced into New York yesterday afternoon from Havana, with a record of two days sixteen hours and twenty minutes from Morro Castle to the Scotland lightship. This puts all previous records in the shade, and earns for the vessel the title of "Queen of the Coasting Fleet."

She cut her own previous best time by four hours and more. Captain Stevens was delighted, and the 150 passengers amazed. To come here from Havana in less than three days was a new experience to them. They were used to putting in four days aboard ship.

Chief Engineer John Vaughan said the machinery worked smoothly all the trip. The Havana covered a course of 1,168 knots, and her hourly average was nearly 18½ knots. At times during the voyage she reached a speed of nearly twenty knots.

The liner passed Morro Castle on her way out of Havana harbor at 7:40 p. m. last Saturday, and up to noon of the next day—sixteen hours and twenty minutes—she had logged 268 miles. The other runs up to noon of yesterday, when she was abreast of the lightship, were 454 and 413 nautical miles.

With the exception of those detained at quarantine, the Havana had all her passengers landed yesterday afternoon. The third day out, on the Ward line's East River pier, and it is said to be the first time in the history of coast navigation that his has been accomplished.

CHILD LOST FOR 46 HOURS FOUND DAZED IN A JUNGLE.

Lost Anna Eschholz Found in the Woods Near New Britain.

Little Anna Eschholz Picked Up in the Woods Near New Britain.

LIPS STRANGELY SEALED.

Girl Uninjured but Has Fever—Many Think She Was Kidnapped and Then Deserted.

After having been lost in the dense woods near New Britain, Conn., for forty-six hours Anna Eschholz, six years old, was found alive and well yesterday afternoon by Albert Voigt, a member of the searching party.

Voigt came upon the child half reclining in the underbrush, near a birch tree, to one of the thickest parts of the forest, nearly a mile from where she was last seen. She rose and held out her arms to him.

Placing her on his shoulders the young man called the other searchers and at the head of the procession bore her to the roadway where a carriage was found, and the child was taken to Herman Doerr's at Mountain Grove.

In the back room of Doerr's hotel the little girl received an ovation. The good news spread rapidly through the country, and from all quarters came men to satisfy themselves that it was true. Most of them had aided in the long search. There were men from the factories in New Britain, and little ones of their own, rough weather-beaten farmers and clerks and their employees who stood hatless in the room and paid mute homage to the pretty golden-haired child, sitting bolt upright upon the lounge, her eyes wide and bright and her face flushed with fever.

She faced the throng in such a way as to indicate his purpose, and he may ask to have the upper turrets, containing eight-inch guns, removed.

stately during the day, said: "She has gone home. She went with a man on a bicycle."

"We paid no attention to this, and within fifteen minutes the search was begun, but we did not see the man when Louisa story reached to me, and was questioned her. She repeated exactly what she had said to me."

The attitude of little Louisa Hein is one of the strangest features of the case. She is a bright, intelligent, but not a highly imaginative child, and to a Journal reporter she declared again yesterday that Anna had gone home with a man on a bicycle, and added:

"She was crying, and I told her not to go. This child had said before, and no amount of questioning could get her to depart from her original statement."

The Father Well to Do.

Herman Eschholz is a well-to-do baker, owning his home and store in New Parkville, in Parkville. He is not rich enough, however, to make the hope of ransom a motive for any one to kidnap his child, and this fact has led the police to express the belief from the first that the child had strayed into the woods and been lost and would eventually be found.

The Doerr Hotel, or, as it is known, the Mountain Grove House, is on the side of a mountain that for miles is thickly wooded with tall trees and a veritable jungle of undergrowth. Those who discountenance the theory of kidnapping believe that Anna Eschholz became separated from her companions at the drinking stand, and crossing the main road entered the jungle and was lost.

It was at 2 o'clock that Voigt came upon the child. An hour later and 200 were gathered at Mountain Grove cheering and congratulating each other.

Herman Eschholz had gone to Plainville in the early morning on one of the clews the police had given him, and he had been waiting for him.

He came to New Britain and took the child home, accompanied by Albert Voigt and Constable Cohen, of New Britain. Anna was asleep when her father reached Mountain Grove. When she awoke she held out her arms and smiled, but made no sound.

The doctor said her temperature was 102, but it is not as high as any serious illness will result from the exposure.

HANNA PUTS HIS HEALTH AHEAD OF HIS PARTY.

Notifies the President That He Will Not Accept Re-election as National Chairman—Is Going Abroad.

Washington, June 6.—Senator Hanna proposes to eliminate himself from the management of politics. He has notified the President that he will not accept reelection as chairman of the Republican Committee for the next Presidential campaign.

In an interview just after the Ohio State Convention Senator Hanna said he had been working for others long enough, and he intended to do something for himself. By this he meant that he intended to restore his health, which during the past year has become a source of anxiety to him and his family. He will leave soon for a noted health resort in the South of France and remain there until he recovers.

The President's friends do not conceal the fact that they would rather have Senator Hanna at the head of party management in the next Presidential campaign than any other man in the party.

Disappearance Very Sudden.

All the children went to the stand where the drinks were sold and I followed them. Anna was there then. Many persons were about the stand, and when Katie was served she turned to me with Anna's glass of soda. The child was gone. I had seen her not five minutes before.

"Where is Anna?" I asked.

"My youngest child, Louisa, nearly six years old, who had been with Anna con-

REPUBLICANS URGE AN EXTRA SESSION.

Many Republicans Say a Currency Reform Bill Should Be Passed Early.

OPINION OF MR. BABCOCK.

He and Mr. Curtis Call at the White House and Discuss the Proposed Measure.

Washington, June 6.—Republican Members of Congress want the President to convene Congress in extra session not later than October. They are trying to convince the President that party politics will be promoted if he calls the session in time for a currency reform bill to be passed in advance of the work of the regular session.

To-day Mr. Babcock, of Wisconsin, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, and Mr. Curtis, of Kansas, member of the Finance Committee, called at the White House and discussed the bill framed by the committee, which will be presented to the Senate Finance Committee, which is to convene in New York on Thursday. Mr. Babcock and Mr. Curtis believe the bill framed by the Atlantic City conference will be accepted by the Senate committee.

"For myself," said Mr. Babcock, "I would like to see Congress called together early in October. I think it would be a wise course to do this. We could then pass a currency bill and have it in good working order long before the election. An early meeting would enable us to get away before hot weather sets in next summer."

Mr. Babcock expressed the opinion that Mr. Henderson, when elected Speaker, will not make radical changes in the committee assignments and chairmanships.

"From what I have heard," Mr. Henderson said, "I do not believe he would jump over a man like Mr. Payne and appoint some one else chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. I have heard it suggested within a day or two that Mr. Grosvonts might get that place, but I do not believe Mr. Grosvonts will take it at Mr. Payne's discomfiture, even if it should be offered. I think the same policy will be followed practically down the line."

"Mr. Henderson will come into the Speakership free and untrammelled and will be just as independent as was Mr. Reed. But I think he will show more consideration to his friends than did Mr. Reed."
